

Cookie Policy

Read this cookie policy to help you understand how we use cookies.

What is a cookie?

A cookie is a small file of letters and numbers sent to your computer when you visit a web site. It is stored in your web browser (that's the program you're using to see this page). Whenever you visit the same web site again, the information stored in the cookie can be retrieved to notify the web site (and only that web site) of your previous activity. A cookie cannot give us access to your computer or to information beyond what you provide us. And they are definitely not viruses, spyware or Trojans that damage your computer.

What is in a cookie?

A cookie contains the name of the server it came from, the lifetime of the cookie, and a value, usually a randomly generated unique number.

This cookie usage policy should be read in conjunction with The Play House's Privacy Statement, which can be accessed at www.theplayhouse.org.uk or by contacting us at info@theplayhouse.org.uk or on 0121 265 4425. Please read this cookie usage policy carefully to understand how The Play House uses cookies.

When you visit www.theplayhouse.org.uk The Play House may store some information commonly known as a 'cookie' on your computer. A cookie helps you get the best out of the website and helps The Play House provide you with a more customised service.

If you have any questions about this information, please contact the Schools Partnerships Coordinator by emailing: info@theplayhouse.org.uk

The below table shows the types of cookies which are frequently used by websites today, together with their purpose:

Cookie Purpose	Description
Essential cookies	A site may use a limited number of cookies essential to particular services a user has requested or for security purposes. For example, a site may use a cookie for a shopping cart function when a user makes a purchase. In particular, if a user has registered to a site or uses a customer portal. A cookie will be used to authenticate the device that a user is using.
Performance cookies	Performance cookies are set to collect and report on aggregate non-identifiable information, which can then be used to report on the performance of the website and provide insights on how the site is currently used and how it can be improved for your audience.
Functional cookies	Functional cookies support how a website functions. For example, by identifying a user's device on a unique but anonymous basis, a website can identify the user's language preferences.
Third party cookies – advertising and social Media	Third party cookies are placed on a user's device. These are cookies from an alternative domain to the one the user is visiting. Third party cookies are often allowed by a web browser, however, they may be blocked, as they are widely used by advertisers to track browsing history.

Our cookies policy

Cookies help us arrange our web site content to match your preferred interests more quickly. They also allow us to deliver the full features of our web site; these are features like your preferences and shopping baskets.
